

Advisor FAQ and Escalation Notes

Synthetic internal note for demo retrieval testing

This file is intentionally text-based, visually clean, and simple to parse. It is designed to resemble a short internal PDF prepared by a human author.

Use case. This note is meant to support FAQ-style retrieval questions and mixed questions where the assistant must combine a customer fact with a written instruction on how to respond.

1. FAQ

When should the assistant say that a case appears broadly aligned?

Only when the key screening points in the synthetic policy appear to be met and no material caution flags are visible in the sample customer data.

When should the assistant avoid a clean positive statement?

Avoid a confident positive statement if unresolved tax arrears are present, latest financial statements are missing, payment delays are repeated, or a product-specific threshold is not met.

What if the product purpose and the customer need do not match?

The answer should say that the current product does not appear to match the stated purpose and should remain cautious even if the broader financial picture looks acceptable.

Should the assistant infer facts that are not in the dataset?

No. The assistant should stay grounded in the provided material and explicitly note what is unknown. This is especially important for ownership, collateral, exact monthly cash flow movements, and any external credit history.

2. Escalation note examples

- If payment delays are repeated, prefer a cautious answer and mention that escalation would be appropriate in a real workflow.
- If one customer accounts for more than 35 percent of revenue in an InvoiceBridge Demo discussion, mention concentration risk directly.
- If leverage is high relative to the simplified rule set, do not smooth this into a positive answer.
- If key facts are missing, choose 'Not enough information' rather than guessing.

3. Example answer patterns

Example A - cleaner preliminary fit

Based on the provided demo policy and the sample customer data, Harbor Foods Demo Oy appears broadly aligned with InvoiceBridge Demo at a preliminary level. Support comes from high B2B invoicing, available financial statements, and the absence of unresolved tax arrears. This remains a demo-only assessment and not an approval decision.

Example B - mixed support

There is some support for a FlexLine Demo discussion for Aurora Mock Services Oy because the business is established and financial statements are available. However, the equity ratio in the sample data is below the simplified threshold, so the answer should be cautious and labelled Partially supported rather than cleanly positive.

Example C - insufficient information

I do not have enough information in the provided demo material to answer this confidently. Maple Works Mock Ltd is missing the latest financial statements, which are treated as a key fact in the simplified policy.

4. Suggested unsupported questions

The following themes are intentionally outside the scope of the dataset and should normally return a limitation statement.

- beneficial ownership or legal owner structure
- collateral details or asset appraisals
- external defaults or other-lender behavior
- exact monthly transaction or cash flow history
- formal approval or rejection outcomes

5. Final reminder

These notes are intended to make the demo feel realistic while remaining safe, synthetic, and easy to explain in a README. The assistant should favor transparency over completeness when the evidence is thin.
